DOMESDAY BOOK being published, and of course more generally consulted than before; it has been the wish of several persons, distinguished for their literary knowlege, that something should be done towards making the Reading of that Survey more easy and useful. This attempt therefore for those purposes is submitted to the publick: but to do justice to that antient Record, much remains to be developed by the able Antiquary.

CONTENTS.

I. An Account of Domefday Book.

11. A List of all the Tenants in Capite, or

DOMESDAY BOOK 1.

KING Alfred, about the year 900, composed a book of this nature, which was extant at Winchester at the coming-in of the Conqueror, but is fince lost; but the incomparable record of Domesday, now remaining at the Chapter-house at Westminster, and lately printed, was begun by order of William the Conqueror, with the advice of his parliament, in the year of our Lord 2 1080, and compleated in the year 3 1086; Commissioners 4 were sent into every county, and juries 5 summoned and impannelled in each hundred out of all orders of freemen, from barons down to the lowest farmers, to give in upon oath to the commissioners, by verdict or presentment, due information, for the faithful and impartial 6 execution of it.

These inquisitions being taken, they were sent up to Winchester ², and the substance of them was afterwards ' methodized, and formed into the record we now call Domesday; and deposited at the king's exchequer.

It is comprised in two volumes, one a large folio, the other a quarto; the first begins with Kent, and ends with Lincolnshire; is written on 382 double pages of vellum, in one and the fame hand 2, in a small but plain character, each page having a double column, and containing 31 counties. After Lincolnshire (folio 373), the claims arising in the Three Ridings in Yorkshire are taken notice of and fettled; then follow the claims in Lincolnshire, and the determinations of the jury upon them; (folio 375.) Lastly, from p. 379, to the end, there feems to be a re-capitulation of every wapentake or hundred in the Three Ridings of Yorkshire; of the towns in each hundred, what number of carucates and oxgangs are in every town, and the owners thereof placed in a very fmall character over them.

The other volume is in quarto, on 450 double pages of vellum, but in a fingle column, and in a large fair character, and contains the counties of Effex, Norfolk, and Suffolk. The counties of Northumberland ³, Cumberland, Westmoreland, and Durham, are not described, neither is Lancashire, under its proper title; but Furness ⁴, and the northern part of the county, as well as the fouth of Westmoreland, with part of Cumberland, is included within the West Riding of Yorkshire; and that part of Lancashire, which lies between the rivers Ribble and Mersey, and which at the time of the Survey comprehended six hundreds, and 188 manors, is described in Cheshire; (folio 269. 2. a.) and part of Ruslandshire is described in that of Northampton, p. 293. b. and Lincoln, 367. a.

The order generally observed in writing the furvey, is to set down in the first place at the head of every county (except Chester 1 and Rutland 2). The king's name, Rex Willielmus, and then a list of the bishops, religious houses, churches, and great men 3, according to their rank 4, that held of the king in capite, in that county; likewise of his thains, ministers, and servants; with a numerical figure in red ink before them, for the better finding them in the book. In some counties, the cities and capital boroughs are taken notice of, before the list of the great tenants is entered, with the particular laws 5 or customs which prevailed in each of them; and in others, they are inserted promiscuously.

After the lift of the tenants, the manors and possessions themselves which belong to the king, and also to each owner throughout the whole county, whether they lie in the same or different hundreds, are collected together and minutely noted, with their under-tenants.

The king's demesses, under the title Terra regis, always stand first, as Rex Willelmus, Rex W. Will. Rex Anglorum, or Rex tenet or habet A, &c. Then the lands which belong to some bishop, religious house, or great tenant, as Terra Archiepi, &c.

In the last volume, under Essex, Norfolk, and Susfolk, the liberi homines are ranked separate; and there is also a title for Invasiones super regem.

The description is generally thus:—How many hides ', or carucates, the land is gelded or taxed at? whose it was in the time of king Edward? who the present owner, and the sub-tenants? what and how much arable land, meadow, pasture, and wood, there is? how much in demesse, how much in tenancy, and what number of ploughs it will keep? what mills and fishings, how many freemen, sockmen, co-liberti, cotarii, bordarii, radmanni, radchenistres, villans, maid-servants, and bondmen there are? in some counties, what young cattle, sheep, working horses, &c. are upon the land? and how many hogs the woods will support? sometimes what churches ' there are, and how many priests or parsons? what customary rents, prestations, and services, are to be paid and rendered out of the lands? what has been added to the manor, what what with-held from it, and by whom? what land is waste, what the whole was let for in the time of king Edward? and what the net rent, whether it was too dear rented, or whether it might be improved 1? But all entries in it are not alike, they being more or less exact and particular in some counties than others, according to the care, diligence, and industry of the commissioners, and scribes.

The making this furvey was a great defign in the Conqueror; and it is plain he confidered the finishing of it as an event of great importance; a charter, granted by him soon after, having this remarkable date. " Post descriptionem totius Anglia."

Mad. Form. Angl. p. 238.

Various are the views the Conqueror is faid to have had in directing it. The Saxon chronicle tells us that, "Rex magnum concilium et graves fer"mones habuit cum fuis proceribus de hac terra,
"quomodo incoloretur, et a quibus hominibus,
"quidque rex ipse haberet terrarum et pecudum
"in eo comitatu; et quantum census annui deberet percipere ex eo comitatu."

Chron. Saxon. anno 1082.

² The improvement and increase of arable lands, subsequent to the year 1013, might be very good reasons with William the Conqueror for making his survey.

Some attribute it to his avarice, to increase his revenue; others to his justice, that when danegeld was to be raised, that tax might be laid with more equality.

"Cum Rex Willielmus illud (Danegelt) ali"quando majoris, aliquando minoris emolumenti
"effe in comperto habuisset, optimum esse duxit,
"ut inquisitio per totum regnum haberetur, qua
"dignosceret quantum singula oppida villæ et ham
"lettæ numerare tenerentur."

Append. Hon. Rich. p. 3.

There are historians also who ascribe it to motives of equity, as that by this means every man should be satisfied with his own, and not incroach on his neighbour; others, that he did it, that he might come at the strength of the nation: "Quot milites essent in uno quoque co- mitatu, ut sciret quo numero virorum posset, si si tanta necessitas emergeret, considere."

Mat. West. 229.

But Sir Martin Wright is of opinion, that this furvey was taken upon, or foon after, our ancestors consent to tenures; in order to discover the quantity of every man's fee, and to fix his homage.

A tax of 6s. was raifed upon every ploughland to defray the expences the king had been at in compiling it, which was three times more than danegeld appears to have been affeffed at before.

When

When the furvey was first made, it was called Liber de Wintonia , Rotulus Wintoniæ, and Liber judiciarius, and Judicatorius; but the name it has principally obtained is that of Domesday, and Liber Censualis five Lustrum.

No injustice was complained of in the digestion of so difficult a work, and of so various a nature; the use of it too was very great, as the king by this means came to an easy and exact knowledge of his landed revenue; and the subject's right, when any dispute arose between them, thereby received a new evidence; and at this day, what manor 2 is ancient demesse, and what not, is determinable 3 by Domessay alone.

A fee of 6s. 8d. is paid for confulting the furvey, and 4d. a line for a transcript.

An attempt was made fome years ago to promote the printing of Domesday; but although it did not then succeed, it has lately been effected under the liberal auspices of his present Majesty; and printed by Mr. John Nichols, in a fine type, cut for the purpose by Mr. Joseph Jackson, at the nation's expence, for the use of the members of both houses of parliament, and the public libraries of the kingdom.

THE name is undoubtedly of Saxon ' original, and fignifies the book of judicial verdift.

Sir Henry Spelman has given a fample of the orthography of it, with his reading, as follows:

Matthew of Westminster says, it was begun the 16th; William Chron Bermond, the 17th; the Saxon Chronicle and Henry Huntington, the 18th; Roger Hoveden, the 19th; Upod. Neustriæ, the 20th; but, according to the Red Book in the Exchequer, it was begun in 1080, 13th of William.

This is evident from an entry at the end of the fecond volume of the work itself, except that the fee of Robert de Bruis, p. 332. b. was added after Domesday was made up, and is written in a different hand.

Lord Lyttelton, indeed, in his History of Henry II. vol. 2d. p. 289, fays, "It was made by order of William the Ist, with the advice of his parliament, in the year 1086; but it seems not to have been finished till the following year;" but whether his lordship grounded his supposition on the see of Robert de Bruis being entered subsequent quent to the making up of Domesday, or on what other authority, does not appear.

That these commissioners were discreet and great persons, but generally Normans, appears from a leger book of Worcester, wherein it is said, proof was given "that the church of St. Mary of Worcester had a hundred called Oswaldeslau, before "Remigius bishop of Lincoln, Earl Walter Giffard, "Henry de Ferrers, and Adam, brother of Eudo, "the king's Sewer; who were appointed to inquire "and describe the possessions and customs, as well of the king, as of his chief people in the pro"vince of Worcestershire, and in many others, at the time when the king caused all England to be furveyed and described," &cc.

Coll. Sup. Peerage, vol. II. p. 470. (E.)

Mr. Selden gives us the names of the jury in feveral of the hundreds in Cambridgeshire, which he found in a MS. belonging to the church of Ely, coceyal, as he thinks, with Domesday itself.

"Isti homines juraverunt in Stapleton hundredo:
"Nicholaus de Cheneta, Willielmus de Chipenham,
"homo Gaufridi, Hugo de Heselinge, Warin de
"Saham, Rodbertus Anglicus de Fordham, Ord"mar de Billengesham, Alanus de Burewelle,
"Aluriz de Sneilewelle. Isti homines juraverunt

Pref. Seld. de Eadm. Ed. 15.

Notwithstanding the precaution taken by the Conqueror to have this survey faithfully and impartially executed, Ingulfus confesses, that from pious motives, the possessions of his abbey were not rated, either at their true value or full extent; "non ad verum pretium, nec ad verum spatium, "nostrum monasterium librabant."

(Winchester). They are supposed to have existed there some time, and one of these original inquisitions or returns is still preserved in the library of the dean and chapter of Exeter.

(G.)

Morant's Effex, vol. I. p. xxvII.

There is also a MS. copy (of about the time of Henry II.) of the inquisition of the jury, containing their furvey for most of the hundreds in Cambridgefhire. Mr. Webb has given an account of so much of it as relates to the manor of Wimple, and from thence it appears the jury fet down what all the arable lands in the parish was gelded at, who the owners were, and how many villani, bordarii, cotarii, and fervi, were then upon the lands; and that these inquifitions were afterwards fent up to Winchester, and the lands belonging to each great tenant were feparated and placed in Domesday, under their respective heads, in that county; e.g. The inquisition fet forth, that Wimple was taxed after the rate of 4 hides; that of those 4 hides, 2 hides and a half and half a virgate belonged to Earl Alan; and that that of the same 4 hides, Humphry Dansleville held of Eudo Dapiser 1 hide and 1 virgate and a half: but, when we look into Domesday, we shall find, in p. 194 b. that the part which Earl Alan held in Wimple is placed under his lands; and that the remainder of the lands in Wimple is under the title of Eudo Dapiser, p. 197. b.; and that the Inquisition and Domesday agree, except that the sheep, hogs, working horses, and asses, found by the first, are omitted in the survey.

For a more clear illustration, the reader is here presented with extracts both from the Inquisition, and Domesday.

(Methodized.) When the commissioners made the furvey, they took an account as they went on in their progress, of the king's demesses, and of the lands of every great tenant, in whatsoever vill they were at; but when they had finished their survey, all the lands belonging to the crown, to the religious houses, and to each of the great landholders in different vills in the same county, were classed and collected together (a) from the inquests, and put under the title of its proper owner in the form we now view it.

(I.)

It is probable, the king's commissioners might find it impossible to take any exact survey of those counties, as they had suffered so much by the ravages of war; or they might be at that time in the hands of the Scots, or else in such condition as no commissioners dare adventure into them, to take the returns of juries, and make the survey.

Brad. Int. Append. 17.

As to Durham, all the country between the Teis and Tine had been conferred by Alfred on the bishop of this see; and at the coming in of the Conqueror he was reputed a Count Palatine.

(K.)

Chefter was a County Palatine, and Earl Hugh held the whole of it of the king, except what belonged to the bishop of Litchfield, called Chefter, from his residing there.

The landholders in this county being few, the king's land, and that of the rest of the owners, is not distinguished by titles, and numbers, although they are separately set down.

The

The whole number of tenants in capite, (besides bishops, abbots, priors, and church-men, and the king's thains, eleemofynaries, ministers, and servants), who held all the lands in England of the Conqueror, was about 420°; and all others that had any estates, held of the great tenants by mesne tenure; and each of these had a few sockmen, and an infinite number of men, of slavish condition, called servi, villani, bordarii, and cottarii, under them.

The cities and boroughs, whose customs are taken notice of, are principally the following a ; and this is a very valuable part of Domesday, though hitherto entirely unnoticed; and fully confirms to us, that William the Conqueror made but little alteration in the antient laws and customs which prevailed in the cities and boroughs in the time of Edward the Confessor.

(N.)

It is certain, that all lands, both of the laity and clergy, were at the Survey held of the king directly in capite, and no land whatever, or township, was excepted from the account then taken; and those towns which are not mentioned in Domesday, as having no manor in them, are accounted for in some neighbouring lordships and towns where the manors stood, and are there affessed.

However we are told in the Survey itself, that 7 hundreds out of 12, in Worcestershire, are omitted in that county, they being so quiet and free, that the sheriff had nothing to do with them; and it is often said, that such land was never Hidated, and that the hundred can give no account of it; therefore the conjecture of Camden, that many parts are left out of Domesday, "quia pensistationibus liberæ," may still be well founded.

The names of the hundreds in the respective counties have undergone a great change. Lincolnshire is divided into 30 wapentakes, or hundreds, yet there are only about 19 which bear any thing like the same name, in Domesday, as they do at present, and in Warwickshire there is not now one remaining out of the ten there set down.

C

The orthography also of places in Domesday frequently varies from what we find them described by in records soon after the Conquest, and their present appellation, so that it is with difficulty the real places can often be made out; but probably this does not arise from the scribes or clerks who took down the names being Normans, and those who gave in the information being Saxons, as some 'have imagined; but, from the names being since that time much corrupted and falsely spelt, the names of towns, as they are found in the Survey, being, in the opinion of some 'have real, true, and old names, as they were in the time of Edward the Consessor; and might be taken from Alfred's Domesday, which was at that time extant.

Dugdale observes, that although the Survey here and there takes notice of a church in Warwickshire being in such a vill, there were many more at that time which were not set down.

1. REX WILLELMUS.

1. REX WILLELMUS.

The King's lands are always placed first under the title Terra Regis, and all that held under that title were the ordinary tenants of the King's demesses; and where it is said Rex tenet such a town, he held it in his own hands, and managed it by a Præpositus or Reve, and servants; and so of other great tenants in capite, where it is said they held such and such manors and towns, without mentioning any tenant that held under them (unless it were an omission of the commissioners that took the survey, or their clerks, or the ignorance of the jury or C 4 inquest, that might not know them), they were most commonly in their own hands, and managed by a Præpositus or Reve, and servants.

Brady, Int. App. 20.

William is supposed to have possessed 1422 manors or lordships, besides escheated lands, &c.

Brady, Hist. 210.

His revenue was fo great, that Ord. Vitalis fays it was reported to be 1060l. 30s. 1½d. every day in the year, over and above free gifts, fines, and amerciaments for offences. Besides this great revenue, he had 60,000 knights, or horsemen, at his command, to be employed in defence of the realm, without any expence or charge issuing out of his exchequer.

Brady's Hist. 211.

4. BISHOP ' OF ROCHESTER. 5 b.

5. BISHOP OF BAIEUX.

This great man was not only bishop of Baieux in Normandy, but half brother to the Conqueror by the mother's fide, and earl of Kent. also Count Palatine, and Justiciarius Angliæ, and had the high titles of "totius Angliæ vice-"dominus sub rege-princeps Palatii-curæ Pa-" latinæ regnique negotiis specialius præpositus "et rege fecundus," given him by historians; and, what was of more eminence, he was at that time reputed "the wifest man in England." He had 184 lordships, or the greatest part of them in Kent alone, and 255 in other counties, and looking upon himfelf rich enough to purchase the papacy, when it should become vacant, he in 1082 collected his treasures together, sent part of them over to Rome, and was preparing with a great retinue to follow them; but William, having intelligence of his defign, haftened over from Normandy, furprized him in the 1sle of Wight, just as he was going to fail, seized him as earl of Kent with his own hands, and fent him to prison in Normandy. His treasure was seized, and his estates afterwards confiscated, and he did not regain his liberty till William Rufus ascended the throne.

Gundulphus.

This king reflored Odo to his earldom; but Odo finding he had not the fame fway and power as in the former reign, he headed the conspiracy in favour of his nephew Robert duke of Normandy against Rusus; this last however prevailing, he was obliged to abjure the realm for ever, and went into Normandy, where he was received by duke Robert, and had the whole care of the province committed to him. He died at Palermo in Sicily in 1096, in his journey to Rome with his nephew, and was buried in the church of our Lady at Palermo.

His feal appendant to a deed in the possession of Mr. Astle, is engraved in Archæol. I. p. 337, he on one side appearing as an earl mounted on his war horse, clad in Armour, and holding a sword in his right hand; and, on the reverse, as a bishop, dressed in his pontifical habit, and pronouncing the benediction.

Selden, Tit. Hon. p. 686. Hasted, Kent, 61. Nash's Worcestershire, p. 15.

As Domesday was not finished till 1086, it may be asked how is it to be accounted for that all Odo's possessions, which are said to have been confiscated in 1082, are mentioned in the Survey to be in his own tenure. To this it may be answered; that when Domesday was made up from the several returns of the Commissioners, the Scribe might take the returns as he found them, and that it is owing thereto we find all the estates of Odo retained in the Survey, although he had been in disgrace from the year 1082, two years after Domesday was begun; and this opinion may receive countenance, from the entry of queen Matilda's Possessions in Marlow, Euckinghamshire, p. 152 b, for although she died 2d November 1083, the lands are set down under the title, "Matildis Regina," and it is said, "Matilda tenet:" but as she was dead when Domesday was finished, the improved rent is put down there to be 351., though with this remark, that "quando Regina vivebat," it was 151.; but Mr. Pegge is inclined to think Odo's estates were not seized, and that their being found in Domesday must be attributed thereto.

10. EARL

10. EARL EUSTACE.

14

Earl of Bulloigne in Picardy. He married Goda, fifter by the father's fide to Edward the Confessor, and was father to the famous Godfrey of Bulloign, who won Jerusalem from the Saracens. This Eustace had large possessions in England at the time of the Survey.

Earls did not usually add their shires to their Christian names till about the time of Richard the Ist.

Seld. Tit. Hon. p. 636.

11. RICHARD DE TONEBRIGE. 14 a

From Tonebrige in Kent, where he chiefly refided, and had the lands three miles round it every way. He is fometimes called Richard de Benefacta, or Benfield, Richard Fitz Gilbert, and Richard de Clare.

He was eldest son of Gilbert Crispin earl of Brion in Normandy, came into England with William the Conqueror, and was with him at the battle of Hastings; and for his services there, and propinquity of blood, was raised by him to great honours, and large possessions, and among the rest to the earldom of Clare; and he and William de Warren succeeded Odo bishop of Baieux, and William Fitz Osborn, as justiciaries of the realm.

Dugd. Orig. Brady's Int. 274.

12. HAIMO, SHERIFF. 14 a. He was sheriff of Kent, and one of the judges in the county court when the great cause between Lanfrank and Odo was tried.

13. ALBERT CHAPELAIN.

14 a.

He was the king's chaplain.

The word capellanus may be likewise interpreted both secretary and chancellor, for these offices and that of the king's chaplain were in early times one and the same, being always an ecclesiastic, and one who had the care of the king's chapel.

Spelman, verba capella, et cancellarius.

The above twelve were the king's principal tenants in capite, who held immediately of him as of his crown. Hasted's Kent, v. I. p. cli.

All those who are enumerated at the head of every county in Domesday, and are not mentioned as earls or spiritual persons, thani, ministri, or servientes regis, were barons, and held of the king in capite.

26. GEOFFRY DE ORLATEILE.

27. EDWARD SARISBERIE.

36 a.

He was younger fon of Walter de Ewras, or Eureux, Earl of Rosmar, and surnamed Sarisberie, from the lordship of Sarisberie, where he dwelt. He was standard-bearer to Henry the Ist, in the 20th year of his reign, at the samous battle at Brenevill, in Normandy. Ela, great grandchild to this Edward, was married to William Longespee, son to king Henry IId. Chauncey, Hert. p. 558.

28. ROBERT MALLET.

He was fon of William Mallet, to whom the Conqueror, after the battle of Hastings, committed the body of Harold, to see it buried; and it was accordingly delivered to Gueda his mother, by whom it was honourably interred in the abbey of Waltham Cross, which he himself had founded and endowed with 17 lordships in Essex.

William also had been governor of York, and vicecomes of Yorkshire; and, when the Danes took York and the castle, he, his wife, and two children, and a few others, had their lives saved with great difficulty.

This Robert Mallet was owner of several lord-ships in the counties of Surry, Nottingham, Rutland, York, Leicester, Essex, and Suffolk; and Eye, in this last county, was the head of his barony. Possessing this vast estate, he held the office of Great Chamberlain of England, under king Henry the Ist; but taking part with Robert the king's brother, he was disinherited and banished by Henry the Ist, and his high office of Chamberlain of England given to Alberic de Vere.

Peerage, v. II. part 2. p. 9.

29. MILO CRISPIN. 36 b.

He married the heires of Wallingford, and had that honour in her right, which he made his chief feat. He held 88 lordships in England.

whereof the manor and castle of Skelton was the capital of his barony. In the third of King Stephen, he and his son Adam, with all the force they could raise, joined the northern Barons at North Allerton against the King of Scotland; but Robert having received great favours from that king, he, with the assent of the English army, had leave to go to him, which he did, and endeavoured to dissuade him from battle, but returning without success, immediate orders were given for the onset; and both armies engaging, the Scots were entirely defeated. He died 5 Id. May, 6 Stephen 1141, very aged.

He had 25 lordships in Estex alone, and was founder of St. John's Abbey in Colchester. He dyed at the Castle of Preaux, in Normandy, but his body was brought over to England, and buried in his own monastery, on the 28th of February, 1120. William de Mandeville, son of Geosfry de Mandeville, who came over with the Conqueror, married his daughter and heir, and in her right was steward of Normandy.

Hubert de Rie his father was William's principal confidant, and sent over by him, when Duke of Normandy, as Embassador to England, with a grand retinue, to Edward the Confessor, then lying on his death-bed; whom he managed with so much address, as that Edward appointed William to succeed him in the English throne.

In this county, and in Norfolk and Suffolk, many freemen are to be found, and but few formen, and there were more freemen in these three counties than in all the other counties in England.

90. INVASIONES SUPER REGEM. 99

Under this title were entered such people as retained their lands, or had possessed themselves without a title from the Conqueror. That is, they that held them, were neither put in possession by the Sheriff with authority from the King, nor by his legal or special Commissioner, nor by his writ, or brief; and so they were invaders or intruders, and possessed without title, and the lands called invasions.

There were many of these Intruders or Invaders, but perhaps more in Essex, Norfolk, and Suffolk, than in any other counties, for in these three, there are distinct titles concerning invasions.

The reader must observe from this catalogue, that almost all the lands in England were divided by the Conqueror amongst his great men, commanders, soldiers, and ministerial dependents.

The Earldoms and Baronies, Bishopricks and Prelacies of the whole nation, he gave to his Normans, and scarcely permitted any Englishman to enjoy any place of honour, dominion, or power; and such as were favoured with their own lands again, were contented to hold them as tenants to Norman Lords, and under such composition, rents, and services, as they put upon them.

The Church Lands indeed, by the mediation of Abp. Lanfranc, were mostly restored; and Taini or Ministri, servants and rural or other small officers that had served Edward the Confessor, were afterward retained by the Conqueror.

The tocmen, fervi, villans, bordars, cottars, &c. in every town and place, held their lands of the military military tenants, and tenants in ferjeanty, by base and servile tenures; and at the time of making the survey, there was no free focage; Brady being of opinion, that if there had, it would have been entered, as the land holden in Alodio was, for hidage sake: nor does he think there was any frank fee, that is, land holden without performance of any service, such as we now call most of our freeholds; unless some small parcels that belonged to some parish churches, especially in Suffolk, which is called terra libera, or burgage tenure, or the land holden in Alodio in King Edward's time, or afterwards was such; of which there is here and there a town or manor, a hide or carucate, &c. so holden in the Survey.

* Ecclesia and Presbyter not occurring in Domesday Book so often as the subject-matter seems to require, several Writers have inferred, that the number of Parochial Churches in England, at the time of the Survey, was but few; and that where there is not any entry made in that venerable Record of a Church or Presbyter, none ever existed; but the Rev. Mr. Denne, in some doubts he has entertained respecting this question, and which, in the eighth volume of the Archæologia, he has, with great deference, communicated to the Society of Antiquaries, expresses his wishes that such an Hypothesis may not be taken for granted, and thinks that on an accurate inquiry, it will not appear to be well founded; and this opinion is warranted by Dugdale, who expressly says, " that although the Survey here and there takes notice of a " church in Warwickshire, being in such a vill, there were " many more at that time which were not fet down."

2 This cause was tried by virtue of a special commission in the county court of Kent at Pinendene Heath, about 1072. The Bishop of Coustance sat as chief, and represented the King; and several other Bishops, Barons, Great Men, and Freeholders, both English and Norman, out of several counties, composed the court.

Agelric, Bishop of Chichester, on account of his great age, and as most skilled in the laws of the land of any of the realm, was, by the king's command, conveyed to the court in quadriga (a waggon, or chariot.)

The Archbishop and Earl pleaded their own cause, and after a tryal, which lasted three days, the archbishop, by the unanimous suffrages of the whole court, had judgement to recover against the Earl 25 manors, with their customs and appurtenances.

Geldum

Geldum . Gildum. Geld. Geldage. Land-tax. particularly the tax called Danegeld, which varied according to certain emergencies.

Geldum

As Geldum is fo frequently mentioned in Domesday. fome extracts from Mr. Webb's Account of it may be acceptable to the Reader.

It was first imposed in the reign of King Ethelred, about ogi, and was an annual tax of 2s, on every hide of arable land, in the kingdom.

P. C. Webb's Account of Daneg. p. 2.

Every town was to bear a proportion according to the taxation laid on the hundred. Sir Henry Spelman in his Gloffary, p. 292, makes the number of hides of land in England amount to 243,600; confequently the gross produce of this tax, at 28. per hide, would at that rate amount to 24,360l.

Cities and towns which had no arable lands, paid Danegeld in proportion to a certain number of hides. p. 19.

But the produce of this tax was greatly diminished by the many claims of exemption from the payment of it.

The demessee lands, which belonged to the King and Queen, and those in the hands of their immediate tenants and fermors, although affesfed, did not pay this tax; as it would have been paying with one hand, what they were to receive with the other.

The estates of many other persons were originally, or in a course of years, exempted from paying it.

The dem fae lands of churchmen and religious houses were excused from it, in consequence either of the elemosinary grants by which they held their lands from the crown; or by virtue of some general grant antecedent to the commencement of this tax. p. 21.

The demejne lands of the great lords and barons, and others, who held by military fervice, were in like manner

* It usually fignified the lordship or fee of an earl; and the lordship or fee of a baron.

Tenure in capite of the king was twofold; viz. of the king in capite ut de corona, and in capite ut de bonore, baronia, cafro, being in the king's hands.

The holding of the king in capite ut de corona was, when a man was originally feft by the king himself, out of his own demesse, to hold to the seosseand his heirs, of the king and his heirs.

Afterwards, when escheats and wardships fell into the king's hands, the phrase was, to hold of the king in capite ut de henore, and this was found convenient, and even necessary, to contradistinguish this holding from the primary and original holding, which was ut de corona.

A question arising in the 12th Edward the IIId, whether the lands of Roger de Huntingfeld were holden of the king ut de corona, or ut de baronia wel bonore; the treasurer and barons of the exchequer were directed by the king's writs to search Domesday and other records, and to call to their assistance the judges and others of the king's council, and to make their return thereof; they accordingly returned to the king in his chancery a certificate, by which they set forth several things which were found upon the search, and (int. al.) verbatim what they found relating thereto in Domesday; but as to the words contained in the said book of Domesday, they set forth they were not able to make a declaration or interpretation of them, unless just as the words of the book sounded: "Nescimus interpretationem facere nist quat's tenus verba inde sonant."

hundred, until the feparation of ecclefiaftical causes from civil, by William the Conqueror.

Reeves Hift. Eng. Law, vol. 7. p. 45.

It is much to be lamented that the hundreds are not prefixed to the name of each place in every county in Domefday, as in Effex, and fome other counties; but in Dorfet the hundred is only twice named. Hence feveral obscure names cannot be afcertained; and as there are a multitude of fynonymous names of places which did not receive additional denominations to diffinguish them till a century or two after, they cannot be known, except they then belonged to fome religious house. Thus the name of Pidle in Dorsetshire is repeated 8 times, Winterborn 36 times, and some other places almost as often. Not that there are or were so many diffinct places of each name, but because so many different persons held parcels of land in them. Sometimes order and vicinity of places are observed under several titles, but this only happens when possessions in them were held by the same person under the title of whose lands they occur.

* Before freeholds were let out into fuch fmall pittances as they now are, Freeholders were called Barons.

Spelman, Notes on Selden's Tracts, p. 123.

Many of the liberi homines were tenants of the King in capite, and feveral were freeholders of other perfons in military fervice; many of them received the order of knighthood, and others, who had only fcanty fees, or only parts of fees, compounded or fined, that they might not be made Knights.

Freemen who possessed manors, towns, or great part of towns, and had this addition in Domesday, "et liber homo fuit," or, "potuit ire quo voluit," were the same with milites.

These liberi bomines, or freemen, were the only men of honor, faith, trust, and reputation, in the kingdom; and from amongst such as these which were not Barons, the kuights did chuse jurymen, served on juries themselves, bare offices, and dispatched all county business; but these great men sinding such ordices troublesome and expensive, they by degrees threw the burthen, by bribing the sherist and bailists to omit them, upon the small freeholders, who were never intended for the service, nor able to bear it; and by the same corrupt practices, this inferior fort of men were driven to the county courts, and by that means, as being forced to be suitors there, became in process of time electors of Parliament men.

Brad. Gloff. Stat. 13th, 20th, and 28th Edward I. and 42 Edward III. c. 1:.

Several freemen indeed were obliged, by express mention in grants to them, to do service at the county court, &c.

and others were bound to it by prescription, because they and their ancestors have used to make it, but none else were.

2 Inf. 99. 117. Extenta Manerii, 4 Edward I. Kitchin, 290.

The freeholders of a manor, as incident to their tenures, did hold by fuit of court. Hafted, v. I. p. ext.

What we call freehold now, was not in those times really escened such; the land in military tenure was what chiefly had that reputation.

The ordinary freemen before the Conquest, and at the time of compiling Domesday, were under protection of great men; but what their quality was, further than that their persons and blood was free, that is, they were not nativi or bondmen, it will give a knowing man trouble to discover to us:

Dufr. 279. Brad. Gloff. 55. Pref. to Hift. 67.

Some part of the lands holden in military fervice was frequently, by licence, changed into rent, and the possession called Novi Feossati; and these, and such of these, who since the dissolution of monasteries, which were endowed with a third part of the lands of the nation, purchased some small parcels of land holden in see soccase, make at this day the bulk of freeholders.

Brad. Pref. 67. Gloss. 42.

These were freemen who were supposed to belong to the fee of some gr at men; but not being claimed, the King became their protector.

Manser.' Dwelt.

The bishop and his clergy first lived together at the Cathedral Church; but feveral churches were foon erected in diverte parts of each diocefe, for the convenience of those converts who were more remote from the Cathedral. These were not properly parochial Churches, nor had they any certain bounds affigned them: but were in common for the use of those neighbouring converts who pleased to frequent them: and, in our modern phrase, were mere chapels of ease. But as kings first founded cathedrals for the good of their whole kingdom, dioceses and those lesser kingdoms being then of the same extent, so great men first founded parochial Churches for the good of themselves and their dependants. their bounds being those of their territories. The parishes into which dioceses were at first divided were but few in number, not more than one Church being built for the ufe of one fingle territory. After this they were increased, and one perhaps was built in each manor, as either the necessity or the fubdivision of property fuggested. Thus each subordinate parish in time became distinct, and so by degrees that parochial division was fettled, which we now find in England. And that this obtained before the time of Edward the Confessor, appears from this furvey, in which the towns and parishes do very nearly agree with the present di_ vision. Introd. Hutchins's Dorfet, p. 30.

² At the fynod held at Graetly by K. Athelslane, in the year 928, there was a law made respecting the coinage of money, that there should be but one uniform species of it throughout the whole realm; which wise law entirely abolished the privilege many had used, in coining money of their own, to the great prejudice of individuals, and the diministion of the King's crown and dignity. Wilk Con. v. I. p. 206.

The profits of these mints, which were considerable, were fill enjoyed by those who were intitled to them, but they had neither the denomination, stamp, or allay, as heretofore peculiar to themselves; for, as Mr. Selden observes, after this time no money was coined without the King's name or essigles.

Leges Ang. Sax. p. 320.

Before the Norman Conquest, the superintendency of the mint masters, or moneyers, seems by the law of King Canut to have belonged to the Fortreeves of the several places which had the privilege of coinage. After the Norman Conquest, they were put under the direction of the Chief Justicier, or the Treasurer and Earons of the Exchequer, before whom the chief officers of the several mints, as well as the King's, as Bishops, Abbots, &c. took an oath for the just discharge of their office. One of these was an affayer of the money, who affayed it, to see if it was up to the due and old standard, according to the pix of affay, which was constantly, as had been accustomed, made at the Exchequer.

When the King was feifed of any place in demesse, he was lord of the foil, i. e. of all the land within the fite and precinct of the same, and of all the houses, snops, and buildings, crected on it, the herbage, and productions of the earth, profits of fairs and markets, pleas and perquisites of courts, and other profits of every kind within it. And when the King granted a city or town in fee, or perpetual ferm, it was a certain proof, that he was before seifed of the whole of the same, its soil, profits, and appurtenances.

When a town was put to fee farm, the tenure of it was Eurgage, and the particular tenements lying within it were faid to be fo holden.

1 bid. p. 14, 15.

The yearly profit which the King made of his cities, &c. was raifed and paid to him in different ways. Some were included in the general ferm of the county, and were then paid by the sheriff; sometimes the sheriff held it as a custos, or fermor of it, and answered for the ferm of it separately from his general ferm of the county; and sometimes the King let it to ferm to particular townsmen, or to the body of them, as he did his manors to the tenants of them.

• These, with a multitude of others in every county, might be produced to shew, that the orthography of names of places in Domesday, varies very much from the modern way of writing them.

The Norman feribes seldom copied the names of places, but took them down from the mouth of the Saxon Informer, whese pronunciation was different. The Normans might purposely deprive and contract Saxon words, out of a desestation of that language, in which they would not suffer the lawyers to plead, nor children to be instructed; but the sorruption was into a more easy and soft pronunciation.

They fubdied words as well as men. Salm. Surry.

Soca pt hallam de W. &c. habet. Has the foke except over the manor-bouse of W.

2 Socage in its most general and extensive fignification seems to denote a tenure by any certain and determinate service.

It is of two forts: free focage where the fervices are not only certain but honourable; and villein focage, where the fervices, though certain, are of a bafer nature.

Such as held by the former tenure are called in Glanvil, Liberi Solemanni; and by Briton, focage is deferibed under the name of fraunke ferme.

It feems probable, that the focage tenures were the relics of Saxon liberty, and that they escaped the general fate of other property, partly out of favour and affection to their particular owners, and partly from their own infignificancy; as the number of them foon after the Conquest does not feem to have been very confiderable, nor their value by any means large.

* These were the Saxon nobility, and divided into Thani Regis, mediocres, and inseriores. The first in the Saxon times were equal to the Barons in the Normans, as the Thani mediocres were to the lesser barons, or lords of manors, and the inseriores made up the lowest degree of freeholders.

Spelman, Tyrrel, Int. to Hist. Eng. p. 76.

² The name Baron fucceeded after the Normans, into the room of king's Thane; however, in the beginning of the Norman state, that of Thane was often also retained. Nor is it likely that the use of language could have been so suddenly altered that the title of Baron only should have presently expressed it.

Archbishops and Bishops, as well as the great Barons, are also called Thanes.

Don. Berks, p. 56b.

At the end of many counties in Domesday, there is a title for Thani, Servientes, Ministri regis; but the Thani are generally distinct from the Servientes and Ministri, as seeming to be of a superior degree, and holding offices of a less service nature than the others. See table at the end.

* The lands under this description are those lands and manors which were the antient inheritance of the crown; and as appears by Domesday, were actually in the hands of it in the time of Edward the Confessor, or William the Conqueror, and entered under the title Terra Regis.

Brady on Bor. p. 82.

The King's defign was to form a judgement of his own lands and demefines, and those of his capital tenants. Hence the fub feudatarii, or under-tenants, in some counties, were not particularly marked; and many cities and towns, now confiderable for wealth and commerce, are omitted, as not being held by the King or his tenants in capite, but by their feudatarii and under-tenants.

Vicecomes tamen de remanenti invenit totam firmam. And yet the sheriff was charged with the whole farm or rent out of the remainder.

Vicecomiti servitium faciebat per totam Angliam.

Attended the sheriff when required in any part of England.

The Sheriffs of counties had the government and cuflody of them, and not the Earls (unless they were Palatine), otherwife than in cases where they had the sheriffewicks joined with their dignities.

Seld. Tit. Hon. 2d Ed. 676.

They were usually men of high rank and great power in the realm, having one or more counties committed to them by the King at his pleasure, either in custody, or at a ferm certain. To them the King usually committed (together with the counties) his castles and manors lying within their bailwick. They provided the castles with ammunition and other necessaries, and they stocked and improved his manors; in short the sheriff was the King's farmer, or bailiff, and the collector of all his rents and revenues within his district.

Vigin' (Tc. cc. ou. m. 1111.) At that time 200 sheep, now 80.

The pleas for church lands were generally held before all or most of the counties summoned together, in which the lands lay, and the English were called thither to give testimony, whether they belonged to those churches in the time of King Edward; for no others could be competent witnesses, being all strangers to the thing in question.

Brad. Hist. p. 141.

² Benefactors often nominated the particular uses to which they chose their donations should be applyed; either to the maintenance or cloathing of the monks, for lights, hospitality, building, or repairing the Church and its ornaments. Vill', Villus, Villi, Villan', Villani, Villeins.

From Villa, a country farm, whereto they were deputed to do service '.

Villæ

* They are fupposed to have been tenants of a superior degree to Servi; but their employment was mostly very servile, and their persons and property at the disposal of the Lord.

Villeins were either regardant, annexed to the manor or land; or in groß, annexed to the perfon of the Lord, and transferrable by deed from one owner to another: these last held small portions of land by way of sustaining themselves and families, but it was at the mere will of the Lord, and by services not only base, but uncertain as to time and quantity; their tenure was called pure Villanage, and from thence our present copyhold tenures are lineally descended.

2 Black. 90, &c.

Villeins regardant in the King's demefices, were called privileged Villeins, because although they performed villein services, yet they were certain and determinate; they could not alien or transfer their tenements by grant or seossiment, any more than pure villeins could, but were obliged to surrender them to the lord or his sleward, to be again granted out and held in villenage; this is no other than the tenure in antient demesse, to which, as partaking of the baseness of villenage in the nature of its services, and the freedom of socage in their certainty, Bracton has given a name compounded out of both, and calls it Villanum Secagium, Bract. 1. 4. tr. 1.

c. 28. 2d Black, p. 98, 99. Somn, Gav. p. 139.

Villeins might be enfranchifed by manumiffion, which is either express, or impiyed: express; as where a man granted to the villein a deed or manumiffion: implied; as where a man bound himself in a bond to his villein for a fum of money, granted him an annuity by deed, or gave him an estate

Villæ alodiarii. The allodial or free tenants of a manor.

Villan unum in custodia. Had the custody of one villan.

Villani plus hnt car' qua arabile tra. The villans have more ploughs than arable land.

Vitti arabant CXL acras tree dni et seminabant de pprio semine frumenti et dabant de consuetudine XL lib et LII den'. The villains ploughed 140 acres of the demosite lands; and found seed for it, and paid a customary vent of 111 4s. 4d.

estate in fee, for life, or years; for this was dealing with his villein on the footing of a freeman.

2d Black. p. 94.

What gave the finishing stroke to servitude, were the confusions occasioned by the two contending houses of York and Lancaster, when the whole kingdom was divided, and every Lord obliged, even for his own security, to take part with one side or the other: and when once engaged, necessitated to support his party with his whole force. Villeins were therefore smancipated in prodigious numbers, in order to becoming soldiers.

Sullivan's Lect. 25, p. 258, 259.

Tenure in villenage was virtually abolished, by the 12th of Charles II. cap. 24.; and at that time there was hardly a pure villein left in the nation. For Sir Thomas Smith testifies, that in all his time (and he was secretary to Edward the VIth) he never knew any villein in gross throughout the realm; and the few villeins regardant that were then remaining, were such only as had belonged to bishops, monasteries, or other ecclesiastical corporations, in the preceding times of popery.

Those who had estates granted to them by the Barons or Capitanei, and not from the King, were called Valvasores (a degree above Knights) and were unto their lords, the Capitanei or Barones Regis, as they the Capitanei were unto the King: and did in like manner subdivide their lands among their Socmen and military followers, who in old time were called Valvasini, whom Spelman takes to be the same at this day that are the lords of every manor, if not those themselves that we call Knights, as owners of a Knight's see; but Valvasores and Valvasini grew to be consounded; and both of them at last to be out of use, and no other military tenures to be known amongst us, than tenere per Baroniam, and tenere per feodum militares.

Spelm. Rem. p. 18.

In the laws of William 4he Conqueror, the relief of a Vavafor follows that of a Baron. Leg. Gul. 1. 24.

Bracton, who wrote between the 46th and 52d of Henry III. ranks Vavasors between Barons and Knights, and calls them Maggates, et viri magnæ dignitatis; bt Fleta whose book was written after the 13th Edward I. places them next to Milites. Brac. lib. I. c. § S. 2. 4. Fleta, lib. I. c. § S. 4.

The lands which a Vavasor held were called Vavasoria, a Vavasorie; as appears inter Placita H. Term, 10 John, where the Vavasory of the Earl of Salisbury, of the Earl of Muhun, &c. are taken notice of; and the use of it continued at least until the age of Henry IV.

Effex, Norfolk, and Suffolk, are in the last volume of Domesday.

It may be matter of furprize to the Reader, to find from this Table, that great men had often very fmall parcels of land of little value, at a great diffance from their other lands. Perhaps they wanted information of their real worth, when they petitioned for, or accepted of them; or they might think fome little things convenient or improveable; or afterwards they might ferve to gratify fome of their little retainers with what was not worth their own keeping. It appears from fome writers and old deeds, that this was fometimes for the fake of fishing amid fome royalty on river fides; and Mr. Hutchins observes, that on the river Frome in Dorset, that was often the case.

Salm. Hertf. p. 329. Chaun. Hert. Hutchins, Diff. on Dom. p. 4.
